DISCUSSES WAR SITUATION HERE

Hamilton Holt Addresses Interested and Enthusiastic Audience in Brua Chapel. Urges Immediate Calling of Conference.

That President Wilson should immediately call a conference of all the nations of the world now at peace—before Germany can answer the American note—was the suggestion advanced in Brua Chapel this morning by Hamilton Holt, editor of the New York "Independent" in the strongest discussion of the international question heard in Gettysburg since the present great war begun.

"Let this conference discuss any matter which might properly come before it," said Mr. Holt. "Let them take up any of the many matters that need discussion. The program need not be too clearly outlined, but let the call be issued at once, so that, in the event of Germany refusing the American demands no one can accuse us of calling the other nations together to pull our chestnuts out of the fire."

"In the event of Germany refusing our demands there is an element in the United States whose anger will at once be at white heat and who will demand an immediate declaration of war. Let our differences then be placed before this conference already in session. If we must go to war, let it be in the face of cool judgment and not in heat. If this conference of nations rules with us then we could all bring economic pressure to bear against Germany. If they do not stand with us, we can still act independently."

"There is no doubt that the situation between the United States and Germany is now very serious. If Germany refuses the American demands one of three things will happen. Either the people of the United States will let it slide, which is scarcely likely; or they will put economic pressure upon Germany; or something will be done that would result in the declaration of war."

"Suppose this country should declare war on Germany, what would happen? We could do no harm for six months. England does not need the help of our navy and it would take from six to nine months to raise an army sufficiently large to do any harm. If we start to raise an army we would at once stop the exportation of munitions and arms to the belligerents, keeping them at home for our own use. Perhaps this would suit Germany exactly."

"We have already lost 100 men in the Lusitania incident. Shall we send 100,000 more after them? Of course, the question of national honor arises and must be taken into consideration."

Mr. Holt made a powerful argument for international peace and advocated the formation of a Peace League, which has long been suggested and earnestly supported.

This Country Must Lead. "It is up to the United States to lead in this matter," he said. "This country is the world in miniature. Here we have a demonstration that people from all nations may live together in peace. Every president of the United States, from the first great Virginian Washington, to the latest great Virginian Wilson, including Jefferson the Virginian who declared war the world's greatest scourge, has been an advocate of peace through justice."

"After the war," Mr. Holt said, "democracy must be advanced, and we (Continued on Third Page)

SIXTY LOADS OF REFUSE HAULED

Annual Clean-up not so Expensive to the Town as Last Year. More General Effort to Comply with the Requests Issued.

Street Commissioner Newman announced this morning that, after covering every portion of town during the past three days, the annual municipal clean-up had at last been completed. He stated that sixty two-horse wagonloads of rubbish were hauled out to the Menchey sand hole; and that the cost of the "housecleaning" had been about $50.00. This is considerably lower than last year.

Mr. Newman stated that the amount of tin cans, and rubbish of various sorts, was as large as in other years, but that the refusal to remove ashes saved the borough time, labor, and money. The clean-up would still be on, he said, if ashes had been handled. There was a more general tendency to co-operate this year than at the times of other cleaning weeks and everything went along smoothly.

Four teams were used to do the work, and five men in addition to Mr. Newman. The alleys were taken in regular order and old iron, tin, buckets, pans, bird cages, stovepipes, and other material were found placed in boxes and barrels for quick removal. The loading and unloading of the wagons was a tedious and unpleasant task but, with its completion, the highway force had the satisfaction of knowing that it had been thoroughly done.

The men are now employed on the streets again and at various operations under way at the direction of the town council.

WED IN BALTIMORE

Excursionists Planned a Surprise for Their Friends.

Slipping quietly away from their friends and taking advantage of the excursion to Baltimore, on Thursday, Miss Bess Miller, of Hanover, and Oscar Bechtel, of near Littlestown, were married upon their arrival in that city.

All arrangements for the ceremony had been completed before the parties left.

"The bride was attired in white," when the couple left Hanover but other than that there was nothing to indicate to any of their friends that they were on a wedding trip.

Mr. and Mrs. Bechtel will reside in their newly furnished apartment in Hanover. The bridegroom has been employed by his father, who operates a stone quarry near Littlestown.

ANOTHER HOPE

May Reconsider Local Option in State Legislature.

Further consideration of local option in the present Legislature is now considered probable, notwithstanding the Brumbaugh-William local option bill was defeated earlier in the session by an overwhelming majority.

A resolution providing for the appointment of a commission to investigate the advisability of passing such a bill has been prepared, although the Republican leaders have not agreed to have it introduced.

CHAIR FOR TEACHER

The Senior class of the Gettysburg High School on Thursday evening visited the home of Miss Helen Cope, Baltimore street, and presented her with a chair for use in her school room. The boys and girl took with them an ample supply of refreshments for the evening and the popular teacher was surprised successfully.

FOR BETTER ROAD TO GETTYSBURG

Waynesboro Residents will Endeavor to Have Good Roads Day Used to Get Better Connection with the Lincoln Highway.

With a better highway to Gettysburg one of their objects, the road supervisors in the vicinity of Waynesboro, are preparing to devote their energies on Good Roads Day, May 26, to reconstructing their highways toward Gettysburg.

It is the purpose to combine the labor of all the people in the effort to make a good road to lead from Waynesboro through Quincy and Mont Alto and to reach the turnpike at Fayetteville or Blacks Gap.

The road leads to the Chambersburg & Gettysburg turnpike, which has been made a part of the great Lincoln Highway across the continent and which is to be kept in the best of condition.

It will afford an outlet for people of Waynesboro and vicinity to the Lincoln Highway, to the county seat, to Gettysburg and to all places on the highway. In addition to the shorter route to the Lincoln Highway, it will save the tolls for persons who now go to the big thoroughfare by other routes.

After the road leaves Mont Alto there are several routes to the Lincoln Highway. One goes almost due north to Blacks Gap. This road is sandy and not very easy for travel.

Another turns northwest and goes to Fayetteville. This is a much better kept road and shortens the distance to the county seat.

An even shorter route to Chambersburg branches off the Fayetteville road a mile or two north of Mont Alto, goes through Mont Alto and joins the well known Falling Spring road, one of the best in the country. This reaches the Lincoln Highway at Stouffertown.

She was a daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. George Stonifer of McSherrystown, residing in McSherrystown all her life. Besides her husband she is survived by two children John Little and Mrs. Grover McKinney, of McSherrystown, also five grandchildren.

The funeral will be held on Saturday from St. Mary's Church at 9 o'clock, Rev. L. Aug. Reudter officiating. Interment in St. Mary's cemetery.

TO IMPROVE ROADS

Work to be Done on Highways in this Section.

State Highway Department representatives announce that they will give attention to three State roads entering Gettysburg. The new road from here to New Oxford will be swept, given a coat of fine stone, and then oiled. Crushed stone will be placed on the pike from Gettysburg to Littlestown, and on the pike from Gettysburg to Cashtown. The three highways indicated were visited Thursday by the officials who were taken over the route by W. B. Fleming, local inspector.

GUN'S DISCHARGE DISFIGURES BOY

Part of Lad's Face Torn away by Load of shot. Was out Hunting Crows with Companions when Accident Occurred.

William Shearer, 17 years old, son of Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Shearer, of near Loganville, hunting crows on the farm of Samuel Ferree, not far from Abbottstown, had the left side of his face shot off and was otherwise injured when a double-barrel shotgun accidentally discharged Friday morning. The young man's condition is regarded as critical and but slight hope is entertained for his recovery.

Young Shearer, with four companions, including his brother, Paul, Spurgeon Ferree, Norman Boeckel and Harry Hamm, went to the fields surrounding the Ferree farm to shoot crows, which have been seen in that vicinity in great numbers the past several weeks. In a short while a number of the birds were detected in a nearby tree.

Shearer, it is said, in order to get a crouching position for a good shot, placed his gun against a tree. As he reached for it the gun fell and discharged. The entire contents of the right barrel struck Shearer in the face, tearing his left ear entirely off, while his left eye was also shot out. The entire left side of the young man's face and neck received the full effect of the charge.

A companion immediately ran to a nearby home and summoned a physician, who reached the place a short time later and rendered what aid he could. The young man was in an unconscious condition and remained in that state for many hours. He was later removed to the York hospital.

ELUSIVE STEVENS

Detective, Constable, and Citizens are all Evaded.

Harry Stevens, of Heidlersburg, after twice escaping from pursuing constables, is still at large, wanted on a charge of purchasing a horse which he knew had been stolen. Stevens was first sought at his home by Constable Morrell, of Biglerville, and John Fernwalt, a Reading Railway detective. They found the place locked, with Stevens on the inside. While Fernwalt went for a search warrant, Stevens left by a rear door and got away in a buggy. The officers then telephoned and secured the aid of Constable Stary, J. Harvey Neely, R. H. Gibb, and C. A. Hamilton, of York Springs, who gave chase in an automobile.

Just as they were about to overtake Stevens, he jumped from the team and into a field. Gibb followed, caught his man and brought him back, allowing him to get into the team he had formerly occupied. He then claimed that they had no right to arrest him without a warrant and, when his captors were diverted by passing automobiles, suddenly started the horse, and when he was again about to be caught took to the woods, making good his escape.

FRENCH MAKE BIG SWEEP AT ARRAS

Capture Two Towns and the Trenches in Drive.

GERMANS ADMIT REVERSE

The Allies Beat Back Terrific Attacks at Bayonet Point and Take Many Prisoners.

Paris, May 14.—The French war of fice issued the following:
"We won brilliant successes Wednesday evening and Wednesday night to the north of Arras."
"At Notre Dame de Lorette we are masters of the fort, as well as of the chapel."
"In the vast quadrilateral of trenches and earthworks which is to the south of the chapel of Notre Dame de Lorette we have been subjected to a very violent counter attack. A ferocious combat which lasted all night long developed in this quadrilateral. In the morning we were complete masters of the situation, having inflicted very heavy losses on the enemy."
"During Wednesday night we also took by assault all of the village of Carency, as well as the forest to the north of it, Hill No. 125. The German garrison stationed in this village and in this forest wood was composed of one battalion (1000 men) of the One Hundred and Ninth regiment of infantry; one battalion of Bavarian chasseurs, and six companies of pioneers (300 men to a company, total 4800 men). These forces had made of Carency and of Hill No. 125 in the forest a position of great strength."
"In spite of the fact that their numbers had been very much reduced by their losses in killed, wounded and prisoners on previous days, these forces during the entire night put up a desperate resistance to our attack delivered against a maze of trenches, blockhouses and narrow passages."
"We broke down this resistance of the enemy, and at break of day we were in complete mastery of the situation. Our troops killed hundreds of Germans at the point of the bayonet."
"We made 1050 prisoners, of whom about thirty are officers. Included in this latter is a colonel and the commandant of the battalion of chasseurs."
"At Neuville our attacks on the village itself and to the north of the village made perceptible progress. To the north of Neuville we took possession of trenches several hundred yards long, and we occupied the road called the Highway Des Carrieres, which runs from Neuville to Givenchy. In the village itself we occupied only the southern portion, the enemy still holding the center and the northern part. An attack delivered late in the afternoon resulted in our occupying house by house all the central portion of this village. The Germans were driven back to the extreme northern part, where we are outflanking them."
"In the forest of Le Pretre we occupied a new line of the German trenches."

143,500 RUSSIANS TAKEN IN GALICIA

Berlin Report Claims Unchecked Successes.

Berlin, May 14.—The German war office announced that in the recent fighting in Galicia and Russian Poland 143,500 Russians had been captured.

The report also stated that sixty-nine cannon and 255 machine guns had been taken from the Russians, and that the victorious Austrian and German forces, continuing their advance eastward in Galicia, are now approaching the fortress of Przemyśl.

The statement follows:
"In the southeastern theater of war the army under General von Mackensen, in the course of its pursuit of the Russians reached the neighborhood of Sublecko, on the lower Wisloka, and Kolbucowa, northeast of Debica."
"Under the pressure of this advance the Russians also retreated from their positions north of the Vistula. In this section the troops under General Colonel von Woytch, penetrated as far as the region northwest of Kielce."
"In the Carpathians Austro-Hungarian and German troops, under General von Linsingen, conquered the hills east of the upper Stryk and took 3650 prisoners, as well as capturing six machine guns."
"In the battles of Tarnow and Gurlice, and in the battles during the pursuit of these armies we have taken 103,500 Russian prisoners, sixty-nine cannon and 255 machine guns. In these figures the booty taken by the allied troops fighting in the Carpathians and north of the Vistula is not included. This amounts to a further 40,000 prisoners."

AMERICAN NOTE GOES TO BERLIN

Demands Germany Guarantee Safety of Americans.

EARLY REPLY IS EXPECTED

Declares Attacks on Merchantmen Carrying Non-Combatants Must Cease—Monetary Reparation For Lusitania Victims Not Mentioned.

Washington, May 14.—The United States sent to Germany a note protesting against the sinking of the Lusitania, with the loss of more than 100 American lives, and other violations of American rights on the high seas.

After three days of preparation by President Wilson, with the assistance of his cabinet, the document was finally dispatched. A copy of the note was delivered to Count von Bernstorff, the German ambassador, by the state department as a courtesy, and copies were similarly cabled to the American ambassadors at London, Paris and Petrograd for their own information.

In some quarters friendly to Germany the impression prevailed that the Berlin government would accede to the American demands, but state its expectation that the United States would endeavor to secure the unrestricted passage of foodstuffs and conditional contraband consigned to the civilian population of Germany.

Although no mention is understood to be made as to the time when a reply is expected from the imperial government, the belief is that the German foreign office, realizing the state of feeling in the United States, will answer promptly.

The note does not say what steps will be taken or what course will be pursued in the event of an unfavorable reply, but indicates that the United States will spare no pains either by diplomatic representations or otherwise, to obtain an acquiescence in its position.

The principal points in the American note are as follows:
The United States government calls attention to the various incidents in the war zone proclaimed by Germany around the British Isles; the sinking of the British liner Fabala, with the loss of Leon C. Thresher, an American; the attack by German airmen on the American steamer Cushing; the torpedoing, without warning, of the American steamship Gulfight, flying the Stars and Stripes, and finally the torpedoing without warning of the Lusitania, with its loss of more than a thousand lives of non-combatants, among them more than 100 Americans.

These acts are declared to be indefensible under international law. The United States points out that it never admitted Germany's right to do them, and warned the imperial government that it would be held to a "strict accountability" for attacks on American vessels or lives. A strict accounting, therefore, is now asked from Germany.

Expressions of regret may comply with the legal precedents, but they are valueless unless accompanied by a cessation of the practices endangering lives of non-combatants.

The right of neutrals to travel any point of the high seas on neutral or belligerent merchantmen is asserted. In the name of humanity and international law, the United States demands a guarantee that these rights will be respected, and that there be no repetition of the attacks on merchantmen carrying non-combatants.

The giving of warnings to the American public without officially communicating them to the United States government is commented on in connection with the German embassy's printed advertisement before the sailing of the Lusitania, but irrespective of the failure to advise the American government of Germany's purpose, the point is made that notice of an intention to do an unlawful act neither justified nor legalized it.

The suggestion is conveyed that the German government of course could not have intended to destroy innocent lives, and that consequently the German submarine commanders must have misunderstood their instructions. The American government indicates its hope that this will be found to be true, and a cessation of the unlawful practices thereby will result.

In conclusion, Germany's attention is called to the earnestness of the government and people of the United States in this situation. It is made plain that the United States will leave nothing undone either in diplomatic representations or other action to obtain a compliance by Germany to the requests made.

Six More Lusitania Victims Found.

Queenstown, May 14.—A rain and a choppy sea interfered with the search for bodies of the Lusitania's dead, but six more were found in the vicinity of Skull and several others under a life raft. These bodies were all placed in a tug to be brought to Queenstown. The Cunard company offered a reward of $5 each for the recovery of bodies of Lusitania victims, and the American consulate supplemented this offer by another of an equal sum for the body of each American found.

AMERICAN NOTE GOES TO BERLIN

Demands Germany Guarantee Safety of Americans.

EARLY REPLY IS EXPECTED

Declares Attacks on Merchantmen Carrying Non-Combatants Must Cease—Monetary Reparation For Lusitania Victims Not Mentioned.

Washington, May 14.—The United States sent to Germany a note protesting against the sinking of the Lusitania, with the loss of more than 100 American lives, and other violations of American rights on the high seas.

After three days of preparation by President Wilson, with the assistance of his cabinet, the document was finally dispatched. A copy of the note was delivered to Count von Bernstorff, the German ambassador, by the state department as a courtesy, and copies were similarly cabled to the American ambassadors at London, Paris and Petrograd for their own information.

In some quarters friendly to Germany the impression prevailed that the Berlin government would accede to the American demands, but state its expectation that the United States would endeavor to secure the unrestricted passage of foodstuffs and conditional contraband consigned to the civilian population of Germany.

Although no mention is understood to be made as to the time when a reply is expected from the imperial government, the belief is that the German foreign office, realizing the state of feeling in the United States, will answer promptly.

The note does not say what steps will be taken or what course will be pursued in the event of an unfavorable reply, but indicates that the United States will spare no pains either by diplomatic representations or otherwise, to obtain an acquiescence in its position.

The principal points in the American note are as follows:
The United States government calls attention to the various incidents in the war zone proclaimed by Germany around the British Isles; the sinking of the British liner Fabala, with the loss of Leon C. Thresher, an American; the attack by German airmen on the American steamer Cushing; the torpedoing, without warning, of the American steamship Gulfight, flying the Stars and Stripes, and finally the torpedoing without warning of the Lusitania, with its loss of more than a thousand lives of non-combatants, among them more than 100 Americans.

These acts are declared to be indefensible under international law. The United States points out that it never admitted Germany's right to do them, and warned the imperial government that it would be held to a "strict accountability" for attacks on American vessels or lives. A strict accounting, therefore, is now asked from Germany.

Expressions of regret may comply with the legal precedents, but they are valueless unless accompanied by a cessation of the practices endangering lives of non-combatants.

The right of neutrals to travel any point of the high seas on neutral or belligerent merchantmen is asserted. In the name of humanity and international law, the United States demands a guarantee that these rights will be respected, and that there be no repetition of the attacks on merchantmen carrying non-combatants.

The giving of warnings to the American public without officially communicating them to the United States government is commented on in connection with the German embassy's printed advertisement before the sailing of the Lusitania, but irrespective of the failure to advise the American government of Germany's purpose, the point is made that notice of an intention to do an unlawful act neither justified nor legalized it.

The suggestion is conveyed that the German government of course could not have intended to destroy innocent lives, and that consequently the German submarine commanders must have misunderstood their instructions. The American government indicates its hope that this will be found to be true, and a cessation of the unlawful practices thereby will result.

In conclusion, Germany's attention is called to the earnestness of the government and people of the United States in this situation. It is made plain that the United States will leave nothing undone either in diplomatic representations or other action to obtain a compliance by Germany to the requests made.

CORRUPT POLITICS AT END, SAYS TAFT

Declares Name of Machine Has Become Anathema.

Wilkes-Barre, Pa., May 14.—Former President William Howard Taft, who was the guest and chief speaker at the dinner of the Chamber of Commerce here, refused to discuss the war situation or the policy of President Wilson in dealing with Germany. "Not one word from me," he said.

Mr. Taft spoke on the "Signs of the Times" at the banquet, and in opening he invited consideration of some of the important political and social current events since the Civil War.

"In politics," he said, "the name of the machine has become anathema. Corporations have been driven out of politics, and while corruption is never absent, the danger of plutocracy has disappeared and the purification of politics has constituted a real reform, for which all good citizens must be grateful."

Mr. Taft declared he regretted that people, when stirred to indignation, do not stop at wise moderation, but carry the remedy to excess.

"The sad feature of such a remedy," he said, "is that persons who suffer most are those who are least able to bear suffering, the wage earners whose comfort and living are dependent upon regular employment."

Mr. Taft praised trades unions as a means of bettering conditions of working men, but said the movement itself is open to criticism by attempting to place organized labor in a privileged class. He condemned the initiative and referendum, and declared that the representative systems in the legislatures and in conventions will work well if people turn out and vote.

"But we should remember," he said, "under any system the politicians will control if people fail in their electoral duties."

Science does not depreciate the power of the eye. People have been rendered sad or bad or mad, exquisitely happy or strongly fortified by a single glance, though no doubt an instinctive divination or knowledge of the man or girl behind the eyes aids the effect on the imagination.

GERMAN WARNING TO U.S. TRAVELERS

Notice Was Spread Broadcast Through American Papers.

ORDER CAME FROM BERLIN

British Government Seized Anchor Liner Cameronia as She Was About to Leave New York, and Her Passengers Were Transferred to the ill Fated Cunard Ship.

The German embassy during the first week of this month inserted an advertisement in numerous newspapers warning American travelers of the risk they ran in traversing the war zone in merchant vessels belonging to Germany's enemies.

Secretary Bryan said the matter had not been brought officially to his attention. It was understood in Washington, however, both the British and French embassies had mentioned the advertisement to departmental officials, though in an informal way and without making any specific complaint or request in regard to it.

The attitude of the state department is understood to be such that it may take no notice of the advertisement unless formal complaint is made.

The basis for any such complaint remains to be defined, as some officials admit there is, so far as they know, no precedent to follow.

The usual course pursued by a diplomatic representative of a foreign government in Washington who wishes to communicate with the American public, it was pointed out, is to address a suitable request to the state department. It is admitted, however, that since the beginning of the present war virtually all the belligerent nations have made free use of the American newspaper advertising columns without reference to the department in urging their nationals to return to their home countries for war service.

Bernstorff Silent.

Count Bernstorff, the German ambassador, nor any of the embassy staff would discuss the matter. It was explained, however, that the advertisement was inserted in compliance with general instructions from Berlin and was what it purported to be—a warning to American travelers. Embassy officials of the allied countries also were silent on the subject.

The sailing of the Anchor line steamship Cameronia, bound for Glasgow, was canceled April 20. A message was received from the foreign office of the company saying the ship had been requisitioned by the English government. Two hundred passengers booked on the Cameronia were transferred to the Lusitania.

Three Years' Work, Cost $8,000,000, Sunk by Torpedo, Cost $4,000.

The following estimate will serve to present to readers a mental picture of the giant liner Lusitania in comparison with the small but deadly submarine torpedo that destroyed her:

Average length of a torpedo, sixteen feet.

Length of the Lusitania, 790 feet.

Average cost of a torpedo, $4,000.

Approximate cost of the Lusitania, $8,000,000.

Time required to make and test a torpedo, three months.

Time required to build the Lusitania, three years.

AND TIME REQUIRED TO DESTROY THE LUSITANIA WITH TORPEDO, fifteen minutes.

NEUTRALS ON LUSITANIA.

Torpedoed Liner Carried 183 Passengers From This Country.

There were 188 American passengers and not one German aboard the Lusitania when she was torpedoed, according to a revised list of the passengers made public by the Cunard line, 1251 passengers in all. The list showed the various nationalities of the passengers as follows:

First Cabin—Great Britain, 179; United States, 106; Greece, 3; Sweden, 1; Mexico, 1; Switzerland, 1.

Second Cabin—Great Britain, 521; United States, 65; Russia, 3; Belgium, 1; Holland, 3; France, 5; Italy, 1; unknown, 2.

Third Cabin—England, 204; Ireland, 35; Scotland, 13; Russia, 30; United States, 17; Persia, 13; Greece, 3; Finland, 1; Scandinavia, 4; Mexico, 1.

Liner's Master Rose From Forecastle.

Captain W. T. Turner of the torpedoed liner Lusitania is one of the world's best known sailing masters. For all that he is such a retiring man that he doesn't even tell where he lives or the size of his family. No one who knew him would dare ask him his age, knowing that he would dodge for the reason that he has no use for bare inquisitiveness. His friends say that Captain Turner is sixty years of age, which is far beyond his looks. No body knows what the initials stand for, but those who stand near him sometimes refer to him as Tommy Turner. He is among the survivors.

PROMINENT MEN ON THE LUSITANIA

Vanderbilt and Others on Torpedoed Ship's List.

WERE WARNED NOT TO SAIL

Passengers Were Inclined to Disregard Official German Notice, Relying on Vessel's Speed to Save Her—None Canceled His Passage, but All Were Anxious as They Left New York.

Among the numerous prominent passengers on the Lusitania, which was torpedoed by a German submarine off the Irish coast, was Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt, New York city. Just before sailing on May 1 Mr. Vanderbilt received a telegram of warning saying:

Have it on definite authority the Lusitania is to be torpedoed. You had better cancel passage immediately.

The telegram did not frighten Mr. Vanderbilt, who departed to look after his stable in England and remain about three months, returning in the summer to join Mrs. Vanderbilt and his children at Oakland Farm, near Newport, and look after his new hotel in Newport. All reports said Mr. Vanderbilt was lost.

Prominent Names on Passenger List.

Many of the other names on the passenger list of the Lusitania have been seen on the manifests of transatlantic ferries. Among them were those of Charles Frohman, Charles Klein, Elbert Hubbard, the famous writer-philosopher; Sir Hugh Lane, F. Orr-Lewis, J. Foster Stackhouse, the explorer; Federico G. Padilla, Mexican consul-general at Liverpool; Major and Mrs. F. Warren Pearl and their three children; William J. Piermont, Miss Theodore Pope, George A. Powell, Mrs. G. Sterling Ryerson and Miss Laura Ryerson, Mrs. G. W. Stephens, Lady Allan and the Misses Anna and Gwen Allan, Julian de Ayala, Cuban consul general in Liverpool; Lindon Bates, Jr., Charles B. Bowring, Conway S. Campbell-Johnston, Mrs. Campbell-Johnston and Mr. and Mrs. Paul Crompton and family. Some of these are said.

Mme. Marie de Page, wife of Dr. Antoine de Page, surgeon to King Albert, who is in charge of the outfit work of the Belgian Red Cross, sailed for home on the Lusitania. She collected in America $100,000 and $50,000 of supplies.

Warning Did Not Scare Them.

The warning of the German embassy to travelers, published on the steamship pages of the newspapers, that a state of war exists between Germany and her allies and Great Britain and her allies and that those sailing under the British flag or allied flags do so at their own risk did not have any perceptible effect on the passengers sailing away on the Lusitania.

The Americans appeared to treat the German embassy's and the anonymous warnings as a joke. Elbert Hubbard, who, with Mrs. Hubbard, was bound for France, admitted that the Kaiser's warning might be directed against both the Lusitania and himself as the "Lusitania of literature," as he has referred to himself in his writings.

"To be torpedoed would be a glorious way to peter out," he said, "but it would be a good advertisement."

Warned on Steamship's Pier.

Many of the first class and second cabin passengers—there being a big gathering of the latter—on reaching the pier were accosted by strangers, some of whom spoke English with a German accent, who advised them to remain ashore. Edward Mallen, chief of the steamship detective force, drove them away.

While there were no cancellations, many of the voyagers, most of them British, lined up at the rail with white and anxious faces trying to smile away their fears and cheer their tearful friends ashore. They imagined a German submarine, if not a German "escorted" cruiser, was waiting to waylay them.

Unusual precautions were taken to guard the ship and her passengers. Private detectives were on hand to see that no explosives were sent aboard and to ward off suspicious looking visitors. Only those who were identified by passengers were permitted to go aboard.

1,254 PASSENGERS, 850 CREW; LIFEBOATS AND RAFTS FOR 2,836.

There were 2,164 persons on board the Lusitania when she was torpedoed, divided as follows:

First cabin..... 291

Second cabin..... 601

Third class..... 352

Total number of passengers..... 1,254

Total number in crew..... 850

The Lusitania carried in the way of life saving apparatus:

Lifeboats, capacity 51 to 69 persons each..... 22

Lifeboats, collapsible, capacity 43 persons each..... 20

Life rafts, capacity 54 persons each..... 12

Life rafts, capacity 43 persons each..... 5

Total capacity of lifeboats and life rafts estimated by officials of line at 2,836 persons.

Boat figures give minimum capacity 2,836 persons.

In addition there was a life preserver for each person.

VANDERBILT DIED TO SAVE WOMAN

Millionaire Bravely Gave Up Life Belt on Lusitania.

COULD NOT GET ANOTHER.

Survivors Tell of Heroism of Young American When Great Liner Was Torpedoed and Say He Went to Death Like True Sportsman—Frohman, Lane, Was Helpless but Calm.

Two survivors of the Lusitania disaster have given testimony that Alfred G. Vanderbilt died heroically; that he went to death to save the life of a woman.

Thomas Slidell, a friend of Mr. Vanderbilt, who lives at the Kulickbocker club in New York and was traveling with him, told of the sacrifice first. Later Norman Ratcliffe, who lives in Gillingham, Kent, and was returning from Japan, offered verification.

Thomas Slidell said that Mr. Vanderbilt was standing on B deck with two or three persons, all of whom had life belts on.

"Just as the Lusitania was heeling to her final plunge," went on Mr. Slidell, "an old woman, apparently with out friends, came along. Seeing that she was without a life belt, Mr. Vanderbilt without hesitation took off his own, and fastened it around her. At that moment the boat went down."

"What happened to the old woman I don't know, but I do know that Mr. Vanderbilt is dead. He could not swim and must have known that by surrendering his life belt he was sacrificing his own life."

"Some of those standing with him were saved. It was Miss Loney who told me of Mr. Vanderbilt's sacrifice."

"It is not known generally what Mr. Vanderbilt's mission on this trip was. The night before the Lusitania went down he told me in confidence, but I see no reason why it should not be known now that, although he had given large sums to the Red Cross, he felt he had not done enough and was coming over to do more."

"He said that he intended to fit out two motor ambulances and go with them himself to France to help the British and American Red Cross people personally in one capacity or another."

"Now all his plans have come to nothing. He forgot everything in the fact that he could be of service to this old woman. His own life, position and wealth did not count. He did what he knew to be his duty."

Norman Ratcliffe, who was rescued after clinging to a box in the sea for three hours, had with him a steward of the Lusitania.

Died Like Sportsman.

"This steward," Mr. Ratcliffe said, "told me he had seen Mr. Vanderbilt on the Lusitania's deck, shortly after the ship was struck, with a life belt about his body. When the ship gave every indication that it would sink within a few minutes, the steward said, Mr. Vanderbilt took off his life belt and gave it to a woman who passed him on the deck, trembling with fear of the fate she expected to meet. The steward said Mr. Vanderbilt turned back, as though to look for another belt, and he saw him no more."

Oliver O. Bernard, scenic artist of Covent Garden, said:

"I saw Alfred G. Vanderbilt standing at the port entrance to the grand salon. He stood there the personification of sportsmanlike coolness. In his right hand was grasped what looked to me like a large purple leather jewel case. It may have belonged to Lady Mackworth, as Mr. Vanderbilt had been much in company of the Thomas party during the trip, and evidently had volunteered to do Lady Mackworth the service of saving her gems for her."

"Mr. Vanderbilt was absolutely unperturbed. In my eyes he was the figure of a gentleman waiting unconcernedly for a train. He had on a dark striped suit, and was without cap or other head covering."

Frohman's End Was Peace.

"Vanderbilt, the sportsman, is gone. Genial Charles Klein, the playwright, is gone. That erratic American literary genius, Elbert Hubbard, is gone and with him a wife to whom he seemed particularly devoted. And Charles Frohman is gone."

"Frohman was the only body I could recognize in the Queenstown mortuary, and perhaps it will interest his many friends in London and New York to know that the famous manager's face in death gives uncommonly convincing evidence that he died without a struggle. It wears a serenely peaceful look."

"Frohman must have found it more difficult for him to take his place in a lifeboat than any other man on the ship. He was quite lame, and hobbled about on deck laboriously with a heavy cane. He seldom came to the general dining saloon, either out of sensitiveness or because of distress caused by his leg."

Believe Submarines Trapped Lusitania.

Official opinion as to how the Lusitania came to be caught and why so many lives were lost remains a secret. The general unofficial opinion is that several German submarines were assigned to attack the liner and that they maneuvered her into a position where she could not escape.

Pat Moran, Manager of Philadelphia Nationals.

Patrick J. Moran, manager of the Philadelphia National league club, is the early season sensation of the baseball world. When Pat succeeded Charley Dooin as manager he began laying plans for a rejuvenated team. He secured a lot of youngsters and got rid of some of the old timers. "I don't care for waning stars," said Moran. "I want ambitious ball players."

He was willing to part with Magee, Loebert, Dooin and others. Whittier for Magee suited Moran, and many think it was a good play. It is hardly to be expected that he can win the pennant this year, but he has started out showing that he is a clever baseball man and will keep the Quaker team in the running. Moran joined the big league as a member of the Boston in 1901 as a catcher. He went to the Chicago Cubs in 1906 and since 1910 has been with Philadelphia.

Motorboat Wonder For Drexel.

George W. Childs Drexel, the Philadelphia sportsman and commodore of the Corinthian Yacht club, is having built for himself the speed wonder of the 1915 crop of motorboats, a runabout which will be guaranteed to average thirty-two miles an hour. The boat will be called the Ace and will be about fifty feet in length and will have a beam of seven feet eight and one-half inches. Her lines and general appearance as to construction of the hull, coupled with the immense power to be installed, give every indication that the new craft will be able to attain a speed of about thirty-five miles per hour. For propulsion two eight-cylinder high speed motors will be installed in the boat, each of which is rated at about 200 horsepower. The boat is about one-third completed and will be ready for launching early in the coming motor boating season.

Trout in Quarry Pits.

Abandoned granite quarry pits in Gloucester have yielded many more brook trout to the fishermen in that community in the open season than the brooks in the woodland, according to information received at the offices of the Massachusetts state fish and game commissioners. Edward Babson, secretary of the Cape Ann Fish and Game Protective association, was the first one to think of having the quarry pits stocked with trout, and two years ago six cans of fingerling trout were placed in the three pits. This season, when many of the amateur fishermen found very few fish in the brooks, they cast their lines into these pits, and since then there has been a satisfactory catch all around. John E. Peterson is believed to have had the high line trout far, having caught forty-nine trout in the pits in a short time.

Yale's Great Infield.

Yale this season boasts of the best college ball team in the east. An infield of Bush, first base; Millburn, second base; Legore, shortstop, and Kelly, third base, is burning up the "Big Four." However, the brightest spot in the team is Harry Legore, who promises to be the best all round athlete Yale has turned out in years.

Legore, a former Mercersburg academy star, was the star of the football team last fall, easily the best kicker Yale had. He took a flier at basketball and is a streak on the track. But baseball is his pet pastime. Already he has received flattering offers from Connie Mack and John McGraw, the former really offering him a bonus to sign a contract. However, Legore has turned down both offers, and when they name towns after you one hardly could be interested in baseball.

French Athletes Killed.

Thourans, the champion javelin thrower of France, has been killed in action near Ypres while leading an attack against a German position. He had recently been promoted adjutant of his regiment for conspicuous bravery. Three well known French footballers have also fallen. Elie Carpentier, the famous goalkeeper of the Olympique Lillois club, has been killed in the recent fighting at Bausejour. Carpentier was a sublieutenant in the Forty-first regiment of artillery. Miljou and Andre Vernand, other well known soccer players, have also been killed in action.

most politically organize the world. We would now have treaties compelling arbitration between the United States and Germany and Japan if the Senate had not vetoed the treaties, and outside of its membership I blame Theodore Roosevelt more than anyone else for its failure. Mr. Taft hitched his wagon to a star, but some one cut the traces. Mr. Bryan didn't aim so high but he got there.

"Let the great nations of the world combine to enforce peace. Let them combine the strength of their armaments to compel the others to abstain from war. As other nations join this Peace League the combined armament may be just that much decreased, just so that it is still larger than that of other nations on the outside. Finally the people within the nations, not members of the League, will demand disarmament and we will need only enough for the proper 'policing' of the world—a peaceable community."

Vividly picturing the horrors of the present war and its ultimate effect on the progress of the world he said that there were three great arguments against war—the moral, economical, and biological.

"The old doctrine of 'Thou shalt not kill' still holds," Mr. Holt said. "The ruinous destruction of wealth is shown by the fact that from $50,000,000 to $55,000,000 has been spent in the past twenty four hours in its prosecution. There are now 14,000,000 men in arms and for what are they fighting? Do they know, do you know, does anybody know?"

"If this war goes on much longer there will be 5,000,000 men killed and maimed for life. The whole civilization will fall. Think of the fields that will remain unploughed for a whole generation, think of the factories silent for years, think of the halt in progress along the lines of science, literature, and art."

A War Against Women

"They say that the men are the ones who suffer. I say that all wars are waged primarily against women and children. Even now we will have 250,000 widows in Europe with several hundred thousand more fatherless children. Equally we will have 250,000 girls who will either have to remain single or marry inferior men, for it is a well recognized fact that the flower of the male population is the first to be affected. This is shown in Virginia where the best Virginians were the first to enlist in the Civil War, they fought valiantly and the most of them fell. Those who survived the war were in the majority the conscripts, the more inferior men, and may not the fact that their posterity are now in power explain the fact that Virginia does not hold her former proud position of influence in the sisterhood of states?"

"War cannot be stopped by the making of the implements of war more terrible. The present conflict has demonstrated that. This war has shown that men are not afraid to die, that they are not afraid to put themselves against machines. Courage we have, in common with the brutes, and the theory of arming to prevent war will be a fallacy until men become cowards."

Japan and this Country.

Touching on the attitude of Japan toward the United States Mr. Holt stated that he had paid a special visit to Japan to learn the feeling there. In company with many others Mr. Holt said that his opinion was that there would never be war between the United States and Japan unless the United States started it.

Mr. Holt was enthusiastically received by an audience which was composed of the student bodies of College and Seminary, and a number of people from town.

SYNOPSIS.

CHAPTER I.—Le Comte de Sabron, captain of French cavalry, takes to his quarters to raise by hand a motherless Irish terrier pup, and names it Pitchoune.

CHAPTER II.—Sabron dines with the Marquise d'Esclagnac and meets Miss Julia Redmond, American heiress, who gives him an English ballad that lingers in his memory.

CHAPTER III.—Sabron, trying to save Pitchoune's life, declines a second invitation to dinner because of a "very sick friend."

CHAPTER IV.—No more invitation comes from the Chateau d'Esclagnac. Pitchoune, though lame from his accident, thrives and is devoted to Sabron.

CHAPTER V.—Sabron and Pitchoune meet the Marquise and Miss Redmond and after the story of Pitchoune is told Sabron is forgiven and invited to dinner again.

CHAPTER VI.—Sabron is ordered to Algeria, but is not allowed to take servants or dogs. He is invited to a musicale at the Chateau.

CHAPTER VII.—At the musicale Miss Redmond, hearing that Sabron cannot take care of the dog during his master's absence.

CHAPTER VIII.—Pitchoune, homesick for his master, runs away from Miss Redmond. The Marquise plans to marry Julia to the Duc de Tremont.

CHAPTER IX.—Unknown to Sabron, Pitchoune follows him to Algiers.

CHAPTER X.

Together Again.

That night after dinner and a cigarette, he strode into the streets to distract his mind with the sight of the oriental city and to fill his ears with the eager cries of the crowd. The lamps flickered. The sky overhead was as blue nearly as in daytime. He walked leisurely toward the native quarter, jostled, as he passed, by men in their brilliant costumes and by a veiled woman or two.

He stopped indifferently before a little cafe, his eyes on a Turkish bazaar where velvets and scarfs were being sold at double their worth under the light of a flaming yellow lamp. As he stood so, his back to the cafe where a number of the ship's crew were drinking, he heard a short sharp sound that had a sweet familiarity about it and whose individuality made him start with surprise. He could not believe his ears. He heard the bark again and then he was sprung upon by a little body that ran out from between the legs of a sailor who sat drinking his coffee and liquor.

"Gracious heavens!" exclaimed Sabron, thinking that he must be the victim of a hashish dream. "Pitchoune!"

The dog fawned on him and whined, crouched at his feet whining—like a child. Sabron bent and fondled him. The sailor from the table called the dog imperatively, but Pitchoune would have died at his master's feet rather than return. If his throat could have uttered words he would have spoken, but his eyes spoke. They looked as though they were tearful.

"Pitchoune, mon vieux! No, it can't be Pitchoune. But it is Pitchoune!" And Sabron took him up in his arms. The dog tried to lick his face.

"Voyons," said the officer to the marine, who came rolling over to them, "where did you get this dog?"

The young man's voice was imperative and he fixed stern eyes on the sailor, who pulled his forelock and explained.

"He was following me," said Sabron, not without a slight catch in his voice. The body of Pitchoune quivered under his arm. "He is my dog. I think his manner proves it. If you have grown fond of him I am sorry for you, but I think you will have to give him up."

Sabron put his hand in his pocket and turned a little away to be free of the native crowd that, chattering and grinning, amused and curious and eager to participate in any distribution of coin, was gathering around him. He found two gold pieces which he put into the hand of the sailor.

"Thank you for taking care of him. I am at the Royal Hotel." He nodded, and with Pitchoune under his arm pushed his way through the crowd and out of the bazaar.

He could not interview the dog himself, although he listened, amused, to Pitchoune's own manner of speech. He spent the latter part of the evening composing a letter to the minister of war, and although it was short, it must have possessed certain evident and telling qualities, for before he left Algiers proper for the desert, Sabron received a telegram much to the point:

You may keep your dog. I congratulate you on such a faithful companion.

CHAPTER XI.

A Sacred Trust.

His eyes had grown accustomed to the glare of the beautiful sands, but his sense of beauty was never satisfied with looking at the desert picture and drinking in the glory and the loveliness of the melancholy waste. Standing in the door of his tent in fatigue uniform, he said to Pitchoune:

"I could be perfectly happy here if I were not alone."

Pitchoune barked. He had not grown accustomed to the desert. He hated it. It slipped away from under his little feet; he could not run on it with any comfort. He spent his days idly in his master's tent or royally perched on a camel, crouching close to Sabron's man servant when they went on caravan explorations.

"Yes," said Sabron, "if I were not alone, I don't mean you, mon vieux. You are a great deal, but you really don't count, you know."

Before his eyes the sands were as pink as countless rose leaves. To Sabron they were as fragrant as flowers. The peculiar incense-like odor that hovers above the desert when the sun declines was to him the most delicious thing he had ever inhaled. All the west was as red as fire. The day had been hot and there came up the cool breeze that would give them a delicious night. Overhead, one by one, he watched the blossoming out of the great stars; each one hung above his lonely tent like a bridal flower in a veil of blue. On all sides, like white petals on the desert face, were the tents of his men and his officers, and from the encampment came the hum of military life, yet the silence to him was profound. He had only to order his stallion saddled and to ride away for a little distance in order to be alone with the absolute stillness.

This he often did and took his thoughts with him and came back to his tent more conscious of his solitude every night of his life.

There had been much looting of caravans in the region by brigands, and his business was that of sentinel for the commerce of the plains. Thieving and rapacious tribes were under his eye and his care. Tonight, as he stood looking toward the west into the glow, shading his eyes with his hand, he saw coming toward them what he knew to be a caravan from Algiers. His ordonnance was a native soldier, one of the desert tribes, black as ink, and scarcely more childlike than Brunet and presumably as devoted.

"Mustapha," Sabron ordered, "fetch me out a lounge chair." He spoke in French and pointed, for the man understood imperfectly and Sabron did not yet speak Arabic.

He threw himself down, lighted a fresh cigarette, dragged Pitchoune by the nape of his neck up to his lap, and the two sat watching the caravan slowly grow into individuals of camels and riders and finally mass itself in shadow within some four or five hundred yards of the encampment.

The sentinels and the soldiers began to gather and Sabron saw a single footman making his way toward the camp.

"Go," he said to Mustapha, "and see what message the fellow brings to the regiment."

Mustapha went, and after a little returned, followed by the man himself, a black-bearded, half-naked Bedouin, swathed in dust-colored burnoose and carrying a bag.

He bowed to Captain de Sabron and extended the leather bag. On the outside of the leather there was a ticket pasted, which read:

"The Post for the Squadron of Cavalry—"

Sabron added mentally: "—wherever it may happen to be!"

He ordered bakshish given to the man and sent him off. Then he opened the French mail. He was not more than three hundred miles from Algiers. It had taken him a long time to work down to Dirbal, however, and they had had some hardships. He felt a million miles away. The look of the primitive mail bag and the knowledge of how far it had traveled to find the people to whom these letters were addressed made his hands reverent as he unfasted the sealed labels. He looked the letters through, returned the bag to Mustapha and sent him off to distribute the post.

Then, for the light was bad, brilliant though the night might be, he went into his tent with his own mail. On his dressing table was a small illumination consisting of a fat candle set in a glass case. The mosquitoes and flies were thick around it. Pitchoune followed him and lay down on a rush mat by the side of Sabron's military bed, while the soldier read his letter.

SAGE TEA KEEPS YOUR HAIR DARK

When Mixed with Sulphur It Brings Back Its Lustre and Abundance.

Gray hair, however handsome, denotes advancing age. We all know the advantages of a youthful appearance. Your hair is your charm. It makes or mars the face. When it fades, turns gray and looks dry, wispy and scraggly, just a few applications of Sage Tea and Sulphur enhances its appearance a hundred-fold.

Don't stay gray! Look young! Either prepare the tonic at home or get from any drug store a 50 cent bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy." Thousands of folks recommend this ready-to-use preparation, because it darkens the hair beautifully and removes dandruff, stops scalp itching and falling hair; besides, no one can possibly tell, as it darkens so naturally and evenly. You moisten a sponge or soft brush with it, drawing this through the hair, taking one small strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears; after another application or two, its natural color is restored and it becomes thick, glossy and lustrous, and you appear years younger.

BRITAIN TO EXPEL AGED GERMANS

All Others Are to Be Interned, Says Asquith.

RIOTS CONTINUE IN LONDON

The Mob Wreck Shops, While Women and Children Follow and Carry Away the Loot.

London, May 14.—Premier Asquith announced in the house of commons that "all male enemies over military age will be repatriated."

The premier also said that women and children in suitable cases will be repatriated, though some might remain.

The government proposes to segregate "all adult male enemies for their own safety and for the safety of the country," Premier Asquith added.

In announcing the alien policy of the government, the premier said:

"At this moment some 40,000 un-naturalized aliens, of whom 24,000 are men, are at large in this country. The government proposes that all adult males of this class should, for their own safety and that of the country, be segregated and interned. If over the military age they should be repatriated."

"The government recognizes there may be cases calling for exceptional treatment. Women and children in suitable cases should be repatriated, but there no doubt will be many cases in which justice and humanity will require that they be allowed to remain. An official body, judicial in character, will be set up to deal with the claims for exemption, and as soon as the military and naval authorities have provided the necessary accommodations those who have not secured exemption will be interned."

Premier Asquith mentioned incidentally that 19,000 non-naturalized alien enemies already had been interned in Great Britain.

Sinclair Smith delivered a speech in which he warned the government that the temper of the people was such that unless the cabinet carried out the demands of the resolution the people would take the law into their own hands. "We are not out to advocate revolution," said Mr. Smith, "but something must be done and done quickly to save the country."

Although there was a lull in the rioting in many parts of London after the night disturbances, a riot in the vicinity of the custom house, which started in the forenoon, grew more violent as the day progressed. The mob got out of hand and wrecked and looted property on all sides on the least suspicion that it was owned by Germans.

Gangs of women and boys followed the wreckers, the women wearing especially made aprons capable of carrying their booty, while the boys, all trundled wheelbarrows, loading them up with loot as they progressed. The entire sides of bacon were the favorite trophies.

In Kentishtown two German shops were looted. The police soon ended the disturbance.

Anti-German feeling in the Gold thorpe mining district, in Yorkshire, led to violent scenes. Revolvers were fired and four men sustained injuries. The police had to charge the crowd and had great difficulty in keeping the miners in check.

TURKS SINK BRITISH BATTLESHIP GOLIATH

Dreadnought is Torpedoed by Destroyers.

London, May 14.—Announcement that the British battleship Goliath has been torpedoed in the Dardanelles was made in the house of commons by Winston Spencer Churchill, first lord of the admiralty.

While no definite information apparently has been received as to the number of lives lost, Mr. Churchill said he feared it would reach 500.

Mr. Churchill said: "The Goliath was torpedoed Wednesday night in a torpedo attack by destroyers while protecting the French flank just inside the straits."

"Twenty officers and 160 men were saved, which, I fear, means that over 500 were lost."

"The admiral commanding at the Dardanelles also telegraphs that the submarine E-14, which, with so much daring, penetrated to the Sea of Marmora, has reported they sunk two Turkish gunboats and a large Turkish transport."

Captain Thomas L. Shelford was commander of the Goliath.

MAY ATTACK TRANSYLVANIA

Contraband in Cargo Makes Her Liable, Says Berlin.

Rotterdam, May 14.—The semi-official Berlin news agency issues the following:

"The steamship Transylvania, that on Saturday left New York, belongs to the category of ships which carry contraband, and, therefore, is liable to attack by German submarines."

"In the paper Army and Navy, of Feb. 6, there appeared the statement that when the Transylvania left New York on Jan. 23, for Liverpool, her cargo included two 40-centimeter cannon, delivered by the Bethlehem Steel company, which she carried on the foredeck. This was consigned to Harlan & Wolff."

Bulgaria to Remain Neutral.

Vienna, May 14.—The Sofia correspondent of the Neue Freie Presse telegraphs an interview with Premier Radoslawoff, in which the premier is quoted as saying that Bulgaria will remain neutral irrespective of the action of other powers that are now wavering on the brink of war.

AIRSHIP SCOUTING

aiding the man at the gun.

How the Enemy Target Is Located and the Information Conveyed to the Artillery Officers—A Code System That Is Simplicity Itself.

Range finding by aviators is a recognized part of modern warfare, and carefully worked out as any other branch of the service.

The big gun's range is estimated in miles nowadays instead of in yards, as formerly. More often than not the gunners do not see the target at which they are aiming, and the men in the target do not see the spot whence destruction is being pumped at them. High hills and broad valleys probably intervene. But circling about in the air is the busy aeroplane which is establishing contact between the gun and its objective point.

It is essential, of course, that the man in the airship and the man at the gun have a constant system of communication. Seemingly difficult, this is a feat that is simplicity itself. The airship carries certain lights or smoke bombs with which it can convey information to the watchers on the ground. The gunners have great strips of white material which can be formed into letters of the alphabet and can be seen from the airship.

The rest is merely a letter of codes and mechanics. If the letter X means "observe for range" and the letter V means "observe for effect of fire" the airman can convey to the marksman whatever information they may desire.

The first thing, of course, is to locate the target. The airman goes up to a prearranged altitude and scouts about until he finds it. When he is directly over it he drops various lights in some understood combination of numbers or colors. The aviator's height is known, and the distance at which the lights are dropped can be ascertained by instruments. The distance then between the gun and the target becomes a simple problem of triangulation.

The location and distance being known, as well as the proper direction, the aviator gets the signal, "Observe for effect of fire." A shell or so is thrown in the general direction of the target. As soon as the correct line is found the aviator gives the proper signal and then gets the signal to "observe for range." The first shell falls short. The second perhaps overshoots. The third perhaps reaches its mark. The aviator signals "Range," and the rest bombardment is on.

If the gunner wishes to know whether his shells are timed to explode at the right place he signals to the aviator, "Observe for fuse." If he wishes to learn the effect of the cannonade he signals, "Observe for effect of fire." In this way a complete check of all that is going on is obtained.

Rarely, except on the preliminary scouting expedition, does the aviator attempt to fly over the enemy's position. Once he has located the target that part of his work is done. It is naturally the riskiest part, for his appearance is certain to make him the target for defensive aeroplane batteries and probably for a duel with a hostile aeroplane. So he flies back into a safer zone.

His subsequent position is decided largely by weather conditions. When the sun is shining he tries to keep from being between his battery and the sun, because if the gunners have to face the sun to find him it is hard for them to read the signals accurately. If the sun is shining toward the target the aviator gets behind his battery. If the sun is behind the battery the aviator gets between it and the target.

In the early maneuvers, when he is signaling the line of fire, he tries to fly in a regular ellipse at a stated altitude. When "observing for range" he flies in an elongated figure 8. The purpose of this is to enable him to move toward the target in his turns. In this way fire can be observed at every moment.

It is obvious that to insure the effectiveness of all this scientific and mechanical knowledge must be required. Modern shells are so constructed that they can be exploded at any desired height or distance. A shell that bursts too soon is practically useless, while one that bursts too late loses much of its efficacy. An error of a few feet in the calculation of the aeroplane's height or in the target's distance would seriously impair the effectiveness of the fire.

The captive balloon is used for similar observation purposes, but it is not nearly so valuable as the aeroplane because of the latter's greater mobility and its ability to get right over the target and then get away again.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

POPULAR MECHANICS

Fires In Paint Barrels.

Many serious shop fires have had their origin in a paint barrel or tank used for dip painting. Such tanks or barrels occasionally take fire either spontaneously or through other causes, and when once in flame it is very difficult to extinguish it before damage is done. Water is useless, as it only spreads the burning paint; the ordinary fire extinguisher is in about the same class, and sand, while used by some with fair success, so fills the paint with grit and dirt as to render the entire batch unfit for further use. To put out a fire of this kind the American Machinist points out that a mixture of bicarbonate of soda and fine sawdust in about the proportion of ten pounds of bicarbonate to each bushel of sawdust has been found effective. The mixture is thrown into the burning tank and the cover replaced. The fire is almost instantly choked out by the heavy blanket of carbonic acid gas formed by the burning sawdust and sodium carbonate.

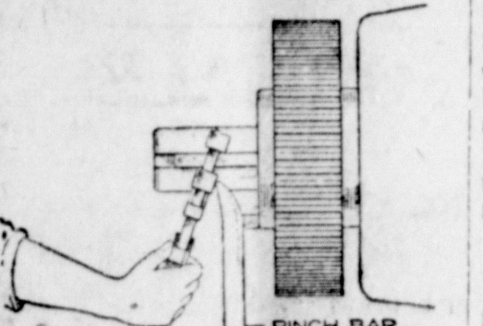

After the fire is out and the tank has cooled the charred sawdust dirt may be skimmed off the top, and the paint underneath will be found free from dirt and in as good condition as before the fire.

When Iron Is Inflammable.

Iron burns freely under favorable conditions, though such a metal is not commonly thought of as combustible. A piece of soft iron when whittled into a flame burns brilliantly. A recently discovered process, termed by its inventor "calorization," said to protect combustible metals from atmospheric action at high temperatures and make them available for a much wider range of usefulness than is now the case, was recently described in the American Machinist. The metals are heated in revolving drums containing, among other things, finely divided aluminum, by which a surface alloy containing aluminum is produced. Pieces which because of their shape and size are not adapted for tumbling may be calorized by packing them in or painting them with a suitable mixture and heating them. After iron is calorized the effect of heating is slight. Instead of burning and the scale falling off, as in the case of untreated iron, practically no effect can be detected.

Removing Plain Keys.

Considerable skill is frequently required to remove plain keys fitted in places where it is impossible to get at them with a drift, says Popular Mechanics. One of the simplest successful methods of obtaining the desired result is the use of a monkey wrench and pinch bar, as shown in the illustration.

METHOD OF USING WRENCH AND BAR.

For this purpose a wrench should be used that has sharp edges on its jaws, so these can get a good grip on the key. To further improve the method grooves may be cut on opposite sides of the key, so the jaws will fit better when straddling the key at a slight angle with the face of the keyed machine part. By using a pinch bar against the movable jaw sufficient force can be applied to remove the key unless it is so tightly driven or rusted in place that it will have to be drilled out before it can be released.

Walnut Filler Ingredients.

A walnut filler is made of three pounds burnt Turkey umber, one pound of burnt Italian sienna, both ground in oil, then mixed to a paste with one quart of turpentine and one pint of Japan drier.

Toasted Crackers.

CUT any kind of cold meat, such as beef or veal for stew, in small pieces. Sprinkle with pepper, salt and flour. Put in a chafing dish in which you have placed a tablespoonful of butter and a few slices of onion. Pour over a cupful of hot water in which there is a tablespoonful of beef stock, a tablespoonful of mushroom catsup and a large tablespoonful of vinegar. Let all simmer for ten minutes, stirring occasionally.

Sweetbreads.

Put two tablespoonfuls of butter in a chafing dish. When very hot put in the sweetbreads which have been boiled and cut in small pieces. Add gradually a tablespoonful of flour, pepper and salt and half a cupful of cream. Stir constantly until you have a smooth sauce. Return the sweetbreads to the chafing dish and serve hot.

Spinach in Mold With Mushrooms.

Boil a bunch of spinach for a few minutes, drain and squeeze out the water. Pound well and pass through a fine colander. Put into a saucepan with a lump of butter and add a few drops of lemon juice. Let boil for a few minutes, turn into a dish and allow to cool. When cold mix with the yolks of two eggs well beaten. Put into a buttered mold, leaving a space in the middle. Bake in a slow oven for an hour. When cooked turn into a dish and fill the center with broiled mushrooms. The mushrooms also can be cooked in a cupful of milk seasoned with butter and flour.

Lima Beans.

Mix two cupfuls of young lima beans that are well cooked in melted butter with salt and pepper to season. When melted pour in the lima beans. Wash and clean half a cupful of mushrooms and mix with the beans. Add a quarter of a cupful of cream. Let simmer ten minutes and serve hot.

Individual Lemon Creams.

Put half an ounce of powdered gelatin to soak in a gill of water; add two well beaten eggs, the juice of one lemon, a little piece of butter and stir in a saucepan over a moderate heat until it slightly thickens, then strain into a deep dish and add one wineglass of brandy and a half pint of whipped cream. Fill small pretty shaped molds, setting first with cold water, and let set and chill. Serve with fancy cakes or Victoria sandwiches.

Repairing Marble.

With a little practice any mechanic can repair holes, cracks or chipped places on marble slabs, so that the patched place cannot be detected from the natural marble, says Popular Mechanics. Use the following mixture as a base filler: Water glass, ten parts; calcined magnesite, two parts; and powdered marble, four parts. These should be mixed thoroughly to a semi-fluid paste. Fill the crack or hole and smooth off level; then, with a camel's hair brush and colors made of mulling in alcohol, work out the veins, body colors, etc., as near to the natural marble as possible. It will depend on the application of the colors whether the repair can be seen or not. Artificial marble slabs can be formed from this mixture.

Cleaning Before Painting.

The proper cleaning of the surface of iron and steel parts before paint or other protective materials are applied is of the utmost importance. Paint which is put on a surface covered with grease or dirt does not come into good contact with the metal and consequently does not adhere to it. Sooner or later the dirt will fall off and the paint will come with it. Beams and other parts which are coated with heavy oil or which have been allowed to lie on the ground until they are covered with mud and dirt should be thoroughly cleaned before painting if it is desired that protection of any permanence is to be secured.—Engineering Magazine.

A SMART SUSPENDER SKIRT.

The general use of the suspender is having a noticeable effect upon the latest separate skirts. The accessory is so simple that it adds practically nothing to the expense of a model, while it adds greatly to its smart effect. The skirt featured in the accompanying illustration is a five-gored effect, with either inverted pleat or habit back. Developed in cloth, serge or gabardine, if 54 inches wide, medium size requires 2 1/2 yards of material. For the stay 1/2 yard of belting 3 inches wide is needed. First, carefully place the front gore on a lengthwise fold of the material, leaving a space from the edge about as long as a quarter of the length of the back gore. Now the back gore can be placed at the left of the front gore, on a lengthwise thread of the goods and if properly arranged the lower edge will rest within an inch of the edge of the goods. The shoulder strap and side gore are also placed on a lengthwise thread, while the bodice is laid crosswise, on a fold of the material. There are two pocket sections, "D" and "E," both of which are placed on a lengthwise thread of the material.

The skirt can be shortened by cutting off the lower edges of gores on small "v" perforations. If the habit back is preferred to the inverted pleat, cut off back edge of back gore 3/4 inch from back edge of belt and place belt on material with back edge of a lengthwise or crosswise fold.

Worn with the new shirt waists of striped handkerchief linen the suspender skirt is enjoying great vogue. Novelty is rung in upon the original models, and now soft suede is used for suspenders because it wears well and is good looking.

A simple design that possesses an unusual air of smartness is this suspender skirt in cloth, serge or gabardine.

HEADING THE PROCESSION ON MEMORIAL DAY

By M. QUAD

Copyright, 1915, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.

It was about a week before Memorial day a few years ago that one Horatio Sparrow, a resident of the village of Okemos, entered the drug store in that burg looking as if he had something serious on his mind, and on being encouraged a little he said to the druggist:

"Doc, don't say nothin' to a livin' soul, but the town of Okemos is to be jarred from center to circumference this evenin'."

"In what way?" was asked.
"Never you mind, but be at the post-office at 7 o'clock. Meanwhile get ready to feel the earth tremble!"
"Is it dynamite, Horatio?" was gasped.

"You be there and see!"
Horatio was a man that never got excited when he woke up in the morning and found a cow in his garden, and the druggist felt quite sure he had something big on hand. He must have told about fifty other people what he told him, for there was a big crowd at the postoffice at 7 o'clock in the evening, and all expected to hear big news. Deacon Holden took charge of things, as usual, and as the crowd got impatient he said:

"It is understood, feller citizens, that Horatio Sparrow is goin' to launch a thunderbolt here tonight, and it is with more than ordinary interest that I call the meetin' to order. Stand out, Horatio, and let's hear all about it."
Horatio stood out. He looked pale, but determined. He'd been thinking for a week of what he was going to say, and he started off as smooth as grease:

"The drums are beatin' a wild alarm. There is a warin' of flags, a marchin' of men and a wailin' of women and children. War is upon the land. The life of the nation is at stake."

"By John, but that's flow'ry language!" exclaimed the deacon.
"Anything more, Horatio?"
"I jest want to call your attention to the fact that Okemos has never had a Memorial day parade," replied the orator. "We hev never paraded and never decorated."

"By John, but that's a strong p'int!" shouted the deacon. "Hang me if Horatio ain't knockin' things edgewise. No, sir, we've never had a parade nor decorated any graves, and we ought to be ashamed of ourselves. It is your suggestion that we celebrate the day this year, Horatio?"

"That's a p'int, deacon."
"And it's as strong as a log chain. Yes, sir, we'll celebrate the day, and in order to make it a howlin' success I'll agree to take charge of the parade."
"But I object to that," said Horatio. "Hevin' originated this idea, I think it's fur me to ride on horseback at the head of the procession."

"There was a painful pause, and then Abner Jones, who was in fireman's uniform, jumped off the counter and said: "There shouldn't be no jealousy about this thing. Horatio would look party fine on his spotted horse, and the deacon would be no slouch in his cocked hat, but if there's to be any feelin' over it I'll take the job off their hands. As I'm foreman of the fire company, it comes in my line anyhow."

"I don't propose to give up my right for nobody," said Horatio.
"And I'm thinkin' I'm the man to boss things," added the deacon.

"It appears to me," said Silas Lapham as he stood up and rubbed his hands together, "that we are not workin' in complete harmony in this matter. It will be the event of the century. Let us sacrifice any selfish interests as individuals and work to make the affair a general success."

"That's powerful good advice," said the deacon as he rapped on the counter with his cane. "Powerful good. I'll stand ready to sacrifice, and I hope the rest of you do. Any further p'int, Silas?"

"You can call it a p'int or not," said Silas, "but bein' there seems to be a controversy here. I think it better be settled by selectin' me to boss things."

"I'll never surrender my rights!" said Horatio Sparrow.
"Nor me!" added Deacon Holden.
"Nor me!" yelled Abner Jones.

It was evident that the meeting was on the point of breaking up in a row when Joe Richard came sauntering in as calmly as could be. The deacon saw him and called out:

"Feller patriots, before this meetin' breaks up in a row that will send the price of Okemos real estate down 50 per cent and put our civilizashun back fifty years let's hear what Joe Richard has to say about it."

"What's the question?" asked Joe.

"About Memorial day. Shall we decorate?"

"Decorate what?"

"Why, the soldiers' graves."

"I don't see how you are goin' to do it," said Joe as he scratched his ear. "So far as I know or hev bin able to find out nobody from Okemos went to war. It therefore follers that no Okemos man was ever killed. It follers, ag'in, that you might look the graveyard over tur a month and not find a soldier's grave to decorate. 'Pears to me that you had better git yer grave rust."

Two minutes later Joe was the only man left in the postoffice. It was as he had said—there was nothing to decorate, and all the blowing had been for nothing.

The Unpardonable Crime.

A man may forgive a lad who sets fire to orphan asylums and robs poor boxes. But the best he can ever say for a man who steals his turn in a barber shop is that he is a low-down swish snake eater.

Medical Advertising HOW FRENCH PEOPLE CURE STOMACH TROUBLE

A household remedy of the French peasantry, consisting of pure vegetable oil, and said to possess wonderful merit in the treatment of stomach, liver and intestinal troubles, has been introduced in this country by George H. Mayr, who for twenty years has been one of the leading down-town druggists of Chicago and who himself was cured by its use. So quick and effective is its action that a single dose is usually enough to bring pronounced relief in the most stubborn cases, and many people who have tried it declare they never heard of anything to produce such remarkable results in so short a time. It is known as Mayr's Wonderful Remedy and can now be had at all leading drug stores. It is sold with the positive understanding that your money will be refunded without question or quibble if ONE bottle fails to give you absolute satisfaction.

Men, this Goes:

THE motorists who are getting the most out of their machines, summer and winter, are the fellows who regularly and consistently feed Atlantic Gasoline. Because Atlantic "Gas" has the gait and get-there spirit that puts pep and power behind a piston—that takes figures off your "gas" bill and puts the pep on your speedometer, where they belong.

Atlantic Gasoline has a uniform "boiling point" that assures every new lot of "gas" to be exactly like the last you put in. Your carburetor, once adjusted, stays put.

Atlantic "Gas" has a liveliness that begets easy starting on all kinds of days, and it has more mileage to the cubic inch than ordinary gasoline. It is made from the finest crude oil that flows—made to a definite standard by the oldest and largest refiners in the State. That's why the merry mob of motorists ask for "Atlantic Gasoline," by name, instead of trusting to luck with "Give me five gallons of 'gas'."

All good garages sell Atlantic Gasoline, and Atlantic trucks and tankers deliver any quantity, anywhere, any time.

Atlantic POLARINE is the 100-percent lubricant that flows freely at all temperatures. It keeps upkeep DOWN.

ATLANTIC GASOLINE

DEMONSTRATION

At 7.00 P. M. this evening in the Public Square

SCHOFIELD'S LIQUID AIR

Cures Punctures While You Ride

A Tire Treatment, Not a Filler

Owing to the great interest of auto owners in this wonderful "trouble preventer" we have arranged to give a public demonstration and will show its use on single tubes, on tubes in casings and how it "cures punctures while you ride," using car for this purpose. That it does not stick tubes to casing, does not interfere with vulcanizing, is not sticky, has no offensive odor and that it can be transferred from tube to tube and from one casing to another. We make no claims for LIQUID AIR which we cannot substantiate, and its effectiveness is fully and strongly guaranteed.

This will be the only public demonstration and all auto owners are cordially invited to witness it.

Messrs. "Doubting Thomas," "Know It All," "Sure it Won't Work" and "Liar Who Used It" are especially invited.

TONIGHT AT 7.00 P. M. IN PUBLIC SQUARE
